THE MUD MILL'S GRIST.

In yesterday's Splatterblotch we find the following choice bit of literature. We propose to treat it as it deserves and after that to dismiss the wretched sheet from our columns. Truth, ridicule, argument all seem utterly wasted

We never have attacked the "colonel's" private record, and if reports nernor West in his dealing with them. that reach us are true it is not the purest. Our jokes at his expense have dealt alone with his political record. We have told what came to us from his own friends, telling how he once was a own friends, telling how he once was a the streets vainly seeking a market, republican, editing a republican paper at Santa Fe, and how later he became a populist at Grand Junction and there published a populist paper. These little political lokes seem to have set our "colone!" wild, and he has resorted to the blackest of personal lies and attacks. Here at home, where we are known it does no harm. where we are known, it does no harm, and him an injury. Away from home it seems to work the same way. The only daily paper published at the city where the "colonel" last hailed from, refers to his vile charges, and then comments on them as follows:

The Sentine peither knows nor cares whether the charges are true or false of The Disparch's contemporary. It only knows that they are beneath the dignity of an honorable newspaper man to make sgnisst any one. The Se time will never be found so low on the grade as that.

The Spistterblotch does not attack our private record for a very good and sufficient reason, it is above and beyond reproach or suspicion, and he can't do it in truth. He can only attack by such an innuendo as we find in the above. He knew when he wrote the above sentence that our private record is above his reach-this vile thing who was brought back in disgrace from a religious mission to Turkey for conduct unworthy a Hottentot, and only to continue the same line of conduct here. This man who was forced to marry his victim to escape the consequence of his base betrayal of an inexperienced and unworldly maiden in the menial ranks of life. A pretty man this to edit the paper which assumes to play the role of organ for the Mormon church here, and which church promptly sat down upon the impudent claim.

This creature after attacking us in the bitterest way possible only a day or two after we came here a stranger, and who knew nothing whatever against us, calls his base attacks mere against us, calls his base attacks mere "jokes." It is too thin, "Jokes!" been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. We have branded his charges against us of belonging to the republican party, editing a republican paper, or being a republican at all, or a populist, as base falsehoods, but the pittifully weak falsifier reiterates the senseless charges upon all occasions.
